International Cybersecurity Law Review

Zeitschrift für Cybersicherheit und Recht

The International Cybersecurity Law Review (ICLR) is chiefly aimed at professionals interested in developments in international cybersecurity, data security, technology, law and regulation. Articles deal with compliance and security regulation, as well as related issues around the globe. Thus, ICLR is providing crucial and reliable information for anyone who is doing IT related business internationally.

Call for Papers:

- For the 2/2021 issue of the International Cybersecurity Law Review, we are seeking contributions on the legal regulation of cybersecurity and related issues worldwide. Contributions in English or German should be approximately 25,000 characters in length, including spaces, and should be submitted no later than August 1, 2021. Further editorial guidance can be found on the journal's homepage.
- For better planning, authors are asked to send contribution proposals as working titles by email to the editor at kipker@uni-bremen.de. Submissions can be made via the Springer Editorial Manager on the website.
- All contributions to the journal will be peer reviewed prior to publication.
